A person who was important in my life

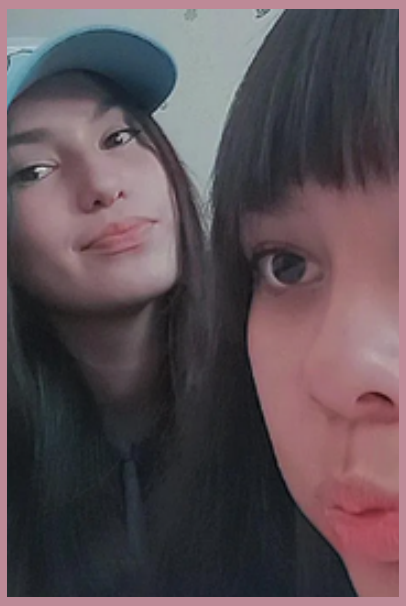
Emma was a friend I had when I was in school, I was 12 years old when I met her. She was very happy and always had a lot of energy. She was not a very good student, but the teachers helped her. We became very good friends, and after classes I went to her house, which was on the street in front of the school, and we did homeworks together.

The things I lived with Emma

She was an important person for me because we were friends until I was 18 years old. We used to listened to music together in her room. She taught me many things about music, artists and bands that she liked. Also she was good at English and helped me study some words.

Currently, I know she studies medicine at the University Antonio Nariño in Boagotá, and she still has me in her close friends of Instagram, but we don't talk anymore. I also know that she has a boyfriend, and I think that he makes her very happy. She is focusing on her studies.

How I felt



Sometimes I felt sad because I remembered the time we spent together, but I also knew that they're things that happened and it was normal. I think that we were living a happy life, even though we were not together anymore.
